Excessive fat may come from the disorganized condition of some vital organ from early childhood. More frequently it is the outgrowth of excessive indulgence in foods and liquids in more mature years, as in the case of Charles James Fox, the great English statesman, and of Prince Bismarck of Germany. Besides the physical dangers which arise from excessive fat there is also parrot-green veivet?" suggested Mrs. the mental to consider. With an accumulation of fat comes sluggishness of the vital organs and necessarily of the brain. Julius Casar knew that two thousand years ago when he remarked

Ethel-Jack danced with me six times to Antony: to-night, and hardly at all with anyone Let me have men about me that are fat. Steels headed men and such as sleep o nights; Yend Cassius has a lean and bungry look; He thinks too much: such men are danger-

Now what is the remedy for this disorganized condition of the system-exessive fatness? A simple application of the laws of nature, no sweating, no Banting, no starvation, no weakening, no laborious exercise. It is the Schweninger method which I have apatied to General Clareland and which again. The cure is based on nature's laws. Its permanency comes from a proper study of cause and effect. That is the sole secret of the treatment. First discover the cause of these obese effects. Then remove the reasons for the unnatural and unsatisfactory condition of the patient and the cure will soon follow. Once properly reduced in weight by the system a man remains

The application of this treatment varies according to the condition of each individual case. In one the use of starch food and sugar-within certain liberal limitations-will be allowed, while in another, the hydroearbons will be rigidly excluded from the bill of fare, at least until their permissibility is clearly indicated by certain changes in the physical conditions. The primary thing in each case is the condition of the patient's kidneys and heart.

Not the slightest bit of Banting or starvation, as it should be called, will be tried in Mr. Cleveland's case. Neither will there be undue exercise. He will eat and drink within prescribed limits and will never suffer exhaustion. The diet menu, as has been followed in the case of other distinguished patients, will probably be something like this:

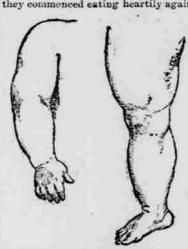

BREAKFAST-One cap of tea or coffee with a little milk or sugar, six ounces; three slices of stale bread, three ounces; with butter, one ounce; two eggs or two or three ounces of either

fish or meat

DINNER—Meat or fish, clight ounces; vegetables, such as spinach, cabbage, string beans, asparagus, tomatoes or beet tops, and farinaesparagus, tomatoes or over tops, and tarina-ceous food, rice, hominy, etc., four ounces; salad with plain dressing, two ounces; fruit ad libitum; wines, hock or claret in moderation. Supper.—Two eggs or lean meat, six ounces; salad or radishes, one ounce; one slice of stale bread, one ounce; fruit, four ounces; light wines in moderation: mait liquors to be avoided. Even a little fat of fresh beef and mutton can be taken, as it has been observed that animal fats do not make fats in the human body, but that of ham, bacon, fresh pork, bacon and corned beef are forbidden, simply for the reason that they are difficult of digestion. Pastry, of course, cannot be thought of for the same reason, as well as for its fattening qualities. Now a word as to other methods advocated. All Banting or semi-starvation systems have proven failures. That of Banting himself, who was an undertaker and not a physician, was conspicuously so. All of his patients, as they commenced eating heartily again

A little bit of stale bread goes with the meat. At half past two another pint of hot water. Nothing more more until the next morning's hot water.

> By continuing this process the adipose tissue is quickly reduced, but the moment it is stopped the patient quickly regnins all his lost flesh and considerably more in addition.

> Neither can anything be gained by surating nor excessive exercise. This is instanced in the case of jockeys and fighters. Once the race is over and the battle won they immediately stuff their bodies with food and liquor and much more besides.

COURTESY TO PUPILS. A Thought for Those Who Are Teaching the Young.

If courtesy to parents is a duty, it is not less a duty to pupils. Everybody knows how Luther's schoolmaster, the famous Trebonius, used to take off his hat when he entered his schoolroom. "I uncover my head," he would say, "to honor the consuls, chancellors, doctors, masters who shall proceed from this school." Dr. Arnold won his way to the hearts of Rugby boys by his simple respect which he showed in accepting their word as true.

A master's success has sometimes been imperiled by so slight a matter as the mistake of not returning boys saintes in the street. For courtesy begets courtesy; it is a passport to popularity. The way in which things are done is often more important than the things themselves. One special point of personal courtesy you will let me menti it is punctuality. To keep a class waiting is to be rude, and to seem to be unjust. For a sense of speculation arises fat man, but he demonstrated by ex- when a master is apt to be late: if he is periment how even he could gain flesh generally four minutes late the boys by sleeping. WISHING ON A FALLING STAR. A Galician Legend Which Gives the Origin of the Custom.

Here and there in the highways and byways of the world many legends and superstitions still linger and continue to retain their ancient prestige. In Galicia, the province northeast of Hungary, the peasants believe that when a star falls to earth it is at once transformed into a rarely beautiful woman with long hair, blonde and glittering. This splendid creature, miraculously engendered, exercises on all who come in contact with her a magical influence. Every handsome youth unfortunate enough to attract her attention becomes her victim. Thus having allured them to her, she encircles them with her arms in an embrace that becomes gradually tighter and tighter until the poor dupes are strangled to death. If certain words are murfail they cause her allurements to lose their power. From this superstition a wish said surely to come true if completely formulated before the light is extinguished. The Spaniards saw the falling stars the souls of their dead friends, the thread of whose existence was cut short by destiny. Arabs thought these stars to be burnthe heads of devils who attempted to enter paradise.

THEY LOST THE WRONG MEN. It Was Only the Good Sallors Who Deserted the Foreign Boats.

The number of desertions that actu ally occurred while the foreign ships of war were here has not been published, but since no complaint has been heard from the commanders generally the number cannot have been large Down at Old Point Comfort, just as the ships were weighing anchor to move up to this city, a reporter of the New York Sun asked the captain of one of the English ships how many men he lost in Virginia. "Only four, sir," said the captain, but they were the wrong four. When we dropped anchor here I called up a number of men that I had had my eyes on for a long time, and I said to them: 'Look here,' I said, you're a bad lot.
